Warden's Letters.

On returning upon deck, he engaged in conversation with Lord Lowther, Mr. Lyttleton and Sir George Byngham, for an hour before dinner. It is understood he complained of the severity with which he was treated, he being consigned to pass his days on the rock of St. Helena, buffetted by the winds, amidst the waste of waters; and that he could not comprehend the policy or the apprehensions of England, in refusing him an asylum, now that his political career was terminated.—He continued to repeat a succession of questions to the same effect, with some degree of impetuosity; but it would be taking a liberty with Mr. Lyttleton who principally maintained the discourse with him. to repeat that gentleman's replies from the information of others. I shall only observe, that they were accompanied with that courteous address which might be expected of him.

In a conversation which I had with count Bertrand on the following day, he complained in very forcible terms, of the needless cruelty of their allotment. The emperor, he said, for that title he continued to receive from his attendants, had thrown himself on the mercy of England, from a full and consoling confidence that he should find a place of refuge. He asked, what worse fate could have befallen him, had he been taken a prisoner on board an American ship, in which he might have endeavoured to make his escape. He reasoned, for some time, on the probability of success in such an attempt; and they might now, he added, have cause to repent that his imperial master had not risked it. He then proceeded:—

"Could not the emperor, think you, have placed himself at the head of the army of the Loire; and can you persuade yourself that it would not have been proud to range itself under his command? And is it not possible—nay, more than probable, that he would have been joined by numerous adherents from the North, South & the East? Nor can it be denied that he might have placed himself in such a position, as to have made far better terms for himself than have now been imposed upon him.—It was to save the further effusion of blood that he threw himself into your arms; that he trusted to the honour of a nation famed for its generosity and love of justice; nor would it have been a disgrace to England to have acknowledged Napoleon Bonaparte as a citizen. He demanded to be enrolled among the humblest of them; and wished for little more than the heavens as a covering, and the soil of England, on which he might tread in safety. Was this too much for such a man to ask?—surely not: nor could such a man imagine, in any moment of depression, if it were possible for such a spirit as his to be so depressed, that the boon would be refused him. It might rather have been a subject of pride to England, that the conqueror of almost all Europe but herself, sought, in his adverse fortune, to pass the remainder of a life, which forms so splendid an epocha in the history of our age, in any retired spot of her domains, which she might have allotted him."

He acknowledged that Napoleon had consulted him as to the probable magnanimity of the English government, on the measure then in contemplation; but in this instance, he said, "I refused the opinion which he requested of me. It was not from any pre-conceived opinion to the prejudice of the English nation, no—far from it, that I hesitated for once to obey him.—But I could not allow myself to become his counsellor in such a critical moment, and on a matter of so much importance to the comfort of his future life and the honour of his name. I was not afraid of any personal injury being offered to him: of that I entertained not the shadow of an apprehension: but I thought it not impossible that his liberty might be endangered, as indeed it was, by the resolution of that hour. I was so agitated by my hopes and my fears in alternate succession, that I could only beg of him to accept my loyal and faithful assurance that I would wait upon his fortunes whatever they might be; but it was for him alone to shape the way to them. "Nor can I express," he added, "how much I rejoice at my persevering resolution; for had any opinion of mine been necessary, in the slightest degree, to the situation in which I now behold my emperor, I should never again have enjoyed a peaceful moment." The terms in which he expressed his thoughts, and the tones which animated them, proved the state of his feelings. There was a kind of soldier-like resolution in his manner; but I could perceive that sorrow was in his heart; and firm as I am in my loyalty as an Englishman, and proud as I am, and as every man, born in our glorious island ought to be, of that distinguished name, and though his enthusiasm betrayed him into sentiments and opinions, in which I could not, by any means, acquiesce, I do not hesitate to acknowledge my disposition to admire the emotions of this faithful Frenchman.

Madame Bertrand's complaints were different in their character as well as language from those of the count her husband; her air and manner were sometimes even accompanied with a gleam of distraction. "What, can you think," she once said to me, "of my situation? Does it not appear to you to be most lamentable; and where are expressions to be found that can suit the description of it to the poignancy of my feelings? What a change for a woman who had held a high rank in the gayest and most splendid court in Europe; where her consequence was such that thousands sought her smiles and were proud to bask in them. The wife of count Bertrand, grand marshal of the palace of the emperor of France, is now destined with her three children, to accompany an exiled husband to an insulated rock, where the pride of station, the pomp of life and the song of pleasure, will be exchanged for a scene of captivity; and such, with all its promised attentions and indulgencies, it must appear to us, surrounded as it is, by the barrier of a boundless ocean."

She was curious to know what the people of England thought of her husband; when I told her that, as far as I could judge, they entertained an higher opinion of him than of any marshal of France, and that his faithful attachment to Napoleon had a romantic air which was not without its admirers in England. It was, indeed, in consequence of that determined feeling, in opposition to what might be supposed to be his real interest and the earnest intreaties of his family, that madame Bertrand had well nigh completed an act of suicide.—The agonizing attempt to throw herself from the Bellerophon into the sea, took place, it seems, in the evening of the day when Napoleon was informed of his future allotment, and, probably, at the moment when the afflicting communication was first made to her.

The little Bertrands are interesting children; the youngest is between three & four years old—the eldest is a native of Trieste and was born when his father was governor of the Illyrian provinces; the second is a girl of an animated disposition, that betrays occasional symtoms of violence. The miltary character appears to have almost exclusively seized on the infant minds of these sprightly urchins; from morning till night, they are employed in fencing, marching, charging in a half canter in imitation of cavalry, &c. &c. in which the girl joins with a true Amazonian spirit, under the direction of a little French boy, who, I presume was born in a camp.

Bonaparte, previous to his leaving the Bellerophon, was, it seems, recommended to select three of his suite to accompany him to St. Helena. Bertrand was, at that time, supposed to be particularly proscribed; but it is understood, that lord Keith took upon himself the responsibility of including such an attached friend in the number of the exiled generals attendants. The others were the count de las Cases, who has been a captain in the French navy and is a man of literary attainments; general count Montholon, and lieutenant-general Gourgond, his two aids-de-camp, who were devoted to his fortunes. The latter officers served him in the Russian campaign, and describe the winter which they encountered there in all its horrors. The Russian cavalry they extol; but represent the Cossacks as easily dispersed. They do not appear to hold the Prussians in very high estimation, but consider them, at the same time, as superior to the Austrians. The English infantry, at the battle of Waterloo, filled them with absolute astonishment; but they represent our cavalry as much too impetuous; they probably found them so on that glorious day.

In a conversation with count Bertrand, which happened to glance on that subject, he could not hide his sensations. The little he said, was in a plaintive tone, though expressed with candour, and accompanied with expressive shrugs of lamentation. "We fought that day" he said, "for the crown of France; bnt you gained the battle and we are undone." I asked him whether he had read Marshal Ney's letter to the duke of Otranto, in defence of his conduct on the bloody field. That publication it appeared he had not seen; and when I informed him in what manner the marshal had censured his master's conduct, and that, in the public opinion, he was thought to have cleared himself from the imputation of erroneous conduct. "Well, well," he replied, "had I been in the command of marshal Ney's division, I might, perhaps, have done worse; but, as I was, I saw much to blame;" but in comparing Bonaparte to Ney, he exclaimed, with a very significant action, "indeed, [redacted]nce is equally great.

Sect. 7. And be it further enacted, &c. That so much of any act of assembly heretofore passed as deprives or prevents the holder of any note, ticket or engagement of credit in the nature of a bank note, from recovering from any individual, bank or corporation, association or partnership, by whom or by any of whose officers or agents the same has been made, signed

PITTSBURGH.

TUESDAY, APRIL 15, 1817.

On Thursday morning last, before the Court of Oyer and Terminer held for this county, came on the trial of James Ryan, charged with the murder of Daniel Decker, late a soldier in the Ordnance Department. The trial, which excited considerable inter-est, (as it was considered to involve an im-portant principle, the right of the military to arrest a deserter in the house of a private citizen,) continued until nine o'clock of Saturday evening.—The jury having re-ceived the charge of the court retired, and returned on Sunday morning at eight o'clock with a verdict of voluntary man-slaughter. The court sentenced the pris-oner to ten years confinement in the Gaol and Penitentiary house of Philadelphia, one year of which was to be solitary confine-ment in the cells of said prison, and to give security, himself in 200 dollars, and his sureties in the like sum for his good beha-viour for twenty years. H. Baldwin and J. W. Hunter, Esqrs. for the prosecution. —W. Wilkins, C. Shaler, and S. King-ston Esqrs. for the defendant.

The society, mentioned in our last, as being in a state of projection at Philadel-phia, for the purpose of accelerating the conveyance of merchandize, &c. from that city into the western country, is now formed, under the name of the "Philadel-phia and Pittsburgh Transporting Com-pany.

The National Intelligencer mentions, that the President has turned his particu-lar attention to the progress of the building of the Capitol, and has intimated his de-termination, that nothing in his power shall be omitted that can tend to expedite the completion of the work.

The beautiful and very superior brig "Cleopatra's Barge," Captain Benjamin Crowningshield, sailed from Salem the 29th ultimo, on a voyage of pleasure, ob-servation and improvement.

BOSTON, April 1.

South American Affairs—Capt. Tuck, of the Globe, from Port au Prince, (which he left the 8th March,) has forwarded us a memoranda, stating that a sloop from Barcelona arrived at Port au Prince on the 4th March, from Jacmel, with intel-ligence, that the Patriot army under Bol-ivar, and the royal army under Morilla had had (from the 15th to the 18th Feb.) several bloody conflicts near Barcelona, that Bolivar ultimately triumphed, having killed, &c. nearly all the royal troops; and that the independence of that part of South America would be secured.

NEW-YORK, April 4.

Late and Highly Important from England.

By the arrival, this morning, of the brig Wrangler, captain Lovett, in 60 days from Havre de Grace, and 48 from Tor-bay, England, the editors of the Commer-cial Advertiser have received a file of Lon-don papers to the evening of the 7th Feb-ruary inclusive—12 days later than were before received.

These papers contain an account of an attack by the mob, upon the Prince Re-gent, as he was passing from the Parlia-ment house to St. James.' The windows of his cariage were entirely broken to pie-ces, and he escaped with difficulty.

LONDON, Jan. 31.

A proclamation has been published, of-fering 1000l. reward for the apprehension of the person or persons guilty of the late treasonable attempt on the life of the Prince Regent.

Message from the Prince Regent.

Lord Sidmouth presented a Message to the House from the Prince Regent.

The Message was read by the Lord Chancellor, and was as follows.

"His Royal Highness the Prince Re-gent, acting in the name and on the behalf of his majesty, has thought proper to or-der to be laid before the House of Lords, papers containing an account of certain meetings and combinations held in differ-ent parts of the country, tending to the disturbance of the public tranquility, the alienations of the affections of the people from his Majesty's person and the gov-ernment, and to the overthrow of the whole frame and system of the law and constitution; and his Royal Highness re-commends these papers to the immediate and serious consideration of the House.

His Lordship moved that the Prince Re-gent's most gracious Message be taken in-to consideration to morrow; and stated, that he should then present the papers al-luded to in the Message, which he should move to refer to a Select committee.—Ordered.

Married, on Thursday evening last, by the Rev. Joseph Stockton, Doctor SHEP-LEY HOLMES to Miss SARAH PE-TERS, daughter of Mr. Lewis Peters.

Caution to the Public,

DR. LEE'S (WINDHAM)

BILIOUS PILLS,

OR

FAMILY PHYSIC.

THE above named pills, are the true and origi-nal patent Lee's Pills, and are the first Pills for which a patent was ever granted in America.

The universal esteem in which these Pills have been held for many years, as a mild, safe, and ef-ficacious Family Medicine, and the great and in-creasing demand for them, in most parts of the U. States and West Indies, has induced several wicked and unprincipled dealers in medicines, (particularly in Philadelphia) to make and sell Pills, which they style Lee's Windham Bilious Pills; making use of a copy of his bill of direc-tions, &c. and offering the same for sale, as the genuine Lee's Pills, whereas the true and original Lee's Pills were never prepared in any place ex-cept in Windham, (Con.) nor by any persons ex-cept the proprietors of the patent. To guard against deceptions of this kind, the public are re-quested to observe, that each box of the true Lee's Pills, is enclosed in an elegant stereotype label, with these words on the sides thereof; Lee's genuine Windham Bilious Pills: and on the end of the label, the words, Samuel Lee, Patentee, &c I Thompson, agent, joint proprietor, &c. and should any be offered for sale without said label on them, the purchaser may be assured that they are counterfeit and not the genuine Lee's Pills. To those who are in the habit of using the genuine pills, the fraud is easily discovered by their effects, and those who may wish to make use of them may guard against counterfeits and imposters, and always be sure of the genuine pills, by observing that they purchase none un-less they are enclosed in the label aforesaid.

The proprietors have for several years past ex-pended large sums, in order to break down counter-feiters and dishonest dealers, but are yet con-vinced that there are some, who not only disre-gard the laws and the rights of others, but also the injuries they do to the community, by selling their own dangerous compositions, for the genuine Lee's Pills, whenever they think they can do it without being detected & brought to justice. For the purpose of putting a stop to such nefarious traffic, the proprietors have been at very great expence in procuring the stereotype label, and the public may rest assured, that no genuine pills, will be sold without the label being around each box, and as a further inducement to the public to be on their guard against the designs of those dealers in medicines, who keep such counterfeit pills in their shops. The proprietors hereby offer a reward of Three Hundred Dollars, to any person who will prove to conviction, the person or per-sons who shall make & sell such counterfeit pills and as proper steps have been taken to discover those persons who sell such counterfeit pills, and on whom suspicion already rests, it is hoped that their names will soon be before the public, as dealers in counterfeit medicines, and their per-sons before the district court of the U. States, to answer for an infringement of the patent.

The approbation of medical gentlemen and the opinion of many thousands of respectable persons who have experienced the good effect of the gen-uine Lee's Pills, as a mild, safe and efficacious pur-gative, for removing jaundice, Headach, indiges-tion, costiveness, cholic, autumnal fevers, and all Bilious complaints, are it is presumed, a suffi-cient recommendation to those who may wish to make use of them in families or elsewhere.

The genuine Lee's Pills, are sold by the most of those druggists in the U. States who choose to keep good articles of medicine in preference to base ones. A deposit of the genuine pills, will always be kept at the store of Thatcher and Thompson, N. W corner of Market and Second street; by the proprietors of the patent, where druggists and others, may always be certain of obtaining the true pills, on the same terms as of the patentee.

J. THOMPSON,
Agent to the Patentee.
